

Appendix B – Site photographs

The proposed expansion site is mostly made up of transformed vegetation with a large component being alien invasive species interspersed with some individual endemics.

A large component (over 80%) of the vegetation has been completely transformed. Soil profiles are also altered through historic surface mining.

The sand mounds to the left of the image, shows that the site has historically been mined for sand. There has also been intensive illegal cutting down of trees for firewood use.

Wattle is illegally harvested on site

Fynbos can be seen in the foreground

Some areas are bare with no vegetation cover
